Tcl (pronounced "tickle" or tee cee ell / ˈtɪkəl / ˈtɪkəl s iːl /) is a high-level, general-purpose, interpreted, dynamic programming language. It was designed with the goal of being very simple but powerful. Tcl casts everything into the mold of a command, even programming constructs like variable assignment and procedure definition. Tcl supports multiple programming paradigms, including object ...

Virtual Network Computing (VNC) is a software application that allows a user to access and control a remote computer system over a network. It is often used for remote administration and support. The user's computer (the client) connects to the remote computer (the server) and sends commands to the server. The server then sends the results of those commands back to the client. This allows the user to see and interact with the remote system as if they were sitting at the computer.
